

2021 ANNUAL MEETING OPEN TO ALL!

Our annual meeting events on February 28th are open to anyone who is interested.

Sure, we'd love to see you become a member:

(<http://www.warerivernatureclub.org/join-us.html>)

In fact, 2nd prize in the mystery photo quiz is a one-year Club membership.

But we're happy to have you celebrate with us as a Club friend.

THE AUCTION HAS BEGUN

One of our favorite annual meeting events is the fundraiser silent auction. This year it's still happening, and it's still a fundraiser to support our programs and field trips (and the technical needs accompanying them). It certainly will be silent since you can check it out on the web-site at your leisure. Featured are some great natural history books and nature art. Take a look!

Visit <http://www.warerivernatureclub.org/auction.html> to view the slideshow and see bidding instructions. Contact warerivernatureclub@yahoo.com if you have something to donate.

TAKE THE MYSTERY PHOTO QUIZ

Check out our challenging set of nature subject photographs—insects, plants, birds, animals, and a few “Can you name this location?” pictures. Prizes will be awarded. Visit <http://www.warerivernatureclub.org/mystery-photo-quiz.html> to view the instructions and slide show.

SPECIAL GUEST SPEAKER

We're excited and honored to host well-known naturalist, artist, and writer Julie Zickefoose who will join us from her home in Ohio for our event. Julie will introduce her professionally-produced video about her most recent book, Saving Jemima: Life and Love With a Hard-Luck Jay and will stay on with us after the video to answer questions. If you've never had the opportunity to meet Julie, consider tuning in for what promises to be an entertaining and heartwarming afternoon program.

Interested in reading the book before the program? We recommend buying directly from Julie here: <http://www.juliezickefoose.com> . Click on the picture of the book. Signed/inscribed copies are available. You don't get that from Amazon! (And an Amazon purchase means Julie receives zero commission.)

FEATURED PROGRAM—

SAVING JEMIMA: LIFE AND LOVE WITH A HARD-LUCK JAY with Julie Zickefoose

Naturalist/artist/writer Julie Zickefoose thinks of herself as an unsung, minor, rather dirty superhero. Her superpower: saving small, economically worthless wildlife that would otherwise die. An orphaned jay named Jemima was one such foundling. Spending nearly a year healing, studying and raising the young blue jay for release opened the door to their world for Julie. She began writing and illustrating Saving Jemima: Life and Love With a Hard-luck Jay immediately upon becoming her foster mother. More than a wildlife rehab story, it's the story of life, love and dealing with great loss; of finding grace and redemption in bonding with a wild bird.

Julie Zickefoose lives and works quietly on an 80-acre wildlife sanctuary in the back country of Whipple, Ohio. She is a prolific writer and painter and Contributing Editor to Bird Watcher's Digest. Natural Gardening for Birds, Letters from Eden, The Bluebird Effect, and Baby Birds: An Artist Looks Into the Nest are joined by Saving Jemima: Life and Love With a Hard-Luck Jay, the intimate story of how an orphaned bird can save a soul.

THE GREAT BACKYARD BIRD COUNT

February 12-15, 2021

Four WRNC members used a variety of approaches to look for birds during the GBBC count period. In addition to the backyard “staples” that keep our neighborhoods stocked with bird life—Black-capped Chickadees, Blue Jays, Dark-eyed Juncos and the like—participants found some unexpected and sought-after species.

With foul weather predicted for the 15th, Ted (Rutland) and Wendy & Alan (Hardwick) opted to take their chances on the 13th, even though it was overcast and temperatures were in the low 20s F. Ted outlined a challenge: find as many species as possible at the home birdfeeders, but also try to add to the list by birding anywhere within town limits for an additional 2 hours. Scores were nearly tied; the Hardwick team (34) spotted more species, including a single Brown-headed Cowbird, Northern Mockingbirds, a Northern Flicker, and Northern Ravens, but Ted (33) found higher-scoring (harder-to-find) and somewhat more charismatic Horned Larks, Common Redpolls, Snow Buntings, and a Cooper’s Hawk.

On the 15th, Christy (Paxton) and Doug (Rutland) counted their feeder visitors but also included birds found on short side trips. Again, the scores were nearly tied and feeder species almost identical, but Doug (21) lucked out finding some Horned Larks and one accipiter, while Christy (20) earned 3 points for a rare-in-winter Gray Catbird found lurking in a bittersweet thicket near her home. And although it occurred the day before, Christy’s sighting of a Barred Owl at Rutland State Park was notable.

HAMPSHIRE BIRD CLUB EDUCATION COMMITTEE

ZOOM WORKSHOP– SHARPIE V. COOPER'S
with Scott Sumner
Wednesday, February 24th
7- 8 p.m.

This will not be a battle of accipiters, rather Scott will cover the similarities and differences between these two birds of prey. Maybe after this session you will be better prepared to tell these two apart in the field and at the feeder.

HARVARD FOREST SEMINARS

NOVEL SPECIES AND CHANGING ENVIRONMENTS: UNDERSTANDING AND MITIGATING HUMAN IMPACTS ON ECOSYSTEMS

by Bianca Lopez

Thursday, February 25th 11 a.m. - noon

Bianca is a postdoc at UMass and Northeast Climate Science Center (NECSC) working at the intersection of invasion ecology and climate change to inform land management. Bianca uses spatial analyses and information on species' traits to understand how people's actions (directly and indirectly) affect natural communities, especially the diversity and composition of plants in urban areas.

This seminar is free and open to the public; no pre-registration is required. For Zoom link or additional information, contact Josh Plisinski: jplisinski@fas.harvard.edu
